Small-cell lung cancer (SCLC) still has a very poor prognosis, despite recent improvement of the overall survival by new therapeutic strategies. Even today, after first line therapy, the majority of patients with limited stage SCLC will relapse. Therefore, it would be beneficial to identify patients who are at high risk of relapse early in the course of therapy. The present study addresses this issue. We analyzed the expression of four cell surface markers by immunohistochemistry in archival formalin fixed and paraffin embedded specimens of tumor tissue from 123 patients with SCLC treated in our institution between 2001 and 2006. Treatment of those patients consisted either in first line platinum-etoposide (PE) or combined platinum-etoposide-cisplatin (PEC) chemotherapy. We found no significant differences between PE or PEC treatment in overall or progression-free survival. Nevertheless, we found that high-risk patients with the combined prognostic score (CSS), calculated by the co-expression of CD133 and EphA2, CD44v3, and CD44v6, all of which are associated with tumor cell invasion and metastasis, had a significantly higher risk of early relapse after first line therapy compared to low-risk patients. Moreover, they experienced significantly shorter progression-free survival after first line chemotherapy. Interestingly, a high CSS remained 3da54e8ca3
