What's new:

That we cannot live alone, We must join with something else. Something, something here, that cannot be seen, And is yet near at hand. No matter what we call it, What matter how we name it, Closer it can be found For this is the mystic depth of all. Where is the meaning? What is near, yet unseen? Closer it can be found? When it is dangerous to venture out of my apartment to fetch things from the grocery store, I like to think about waiting in my own room with weird music playing softly in the background. Weather permitting. Sometimes I will bring them home and set them out on our deck. That's ok. I have done it now and again just to let it all out. Recently we're doing some serious cleaning which I really wish I was allowed to do these exact tasks in the comfort of my own space. Oh well. I wonder why some people still do?!

So here are the musics of my journey. My friend Katey brought me these tapes when we saw each other at a salon fundraiser. They have a powerful effect on me and I truly appreciate the knowledge that I can not write this essay without them. No matter what else I may decide to add to the page. I've never written like this before without intent. It's interesting to hear the authors speak. They are all spiritual teachers in various ways. It gives much food for my starving soul. Thursday, August 2, 2017 When you are alone, Forgetting the better part of human nature You suddenly hear the world round you And all your own horribleness seeming not so unimaginable. And then you see others of the human kind And find so many of them just like you Lost, isolated, deluded So your struggle then begins To live a life more human So when you run out of the yellow rock You'll know what to do Tuesday, July 18, 2017 Do you ever ask your friends for help? You know, that pesky little "What do you do for a living" question that seems to come up fairly often. Fine, I know how you probably feel, so let's just say that I have also asked for help. It's really hard to describe to someone, who doesn't do what you do... what you do for a living. You don't have an image for them and they simply cannot image you
