AddressReader = new AddressReader(); var DownloadTask = new BackgroundDownloadTask(UrlAddress, AddressReader); var result = DownloadTask.Result; }); But I also want to wait for this task to finish before the MainThread continues (Or if this is not allowed in C#, how to execute the MainThread afterwards).
The time where I want to execute that Task is in a UserControl which is in a separate thread when the user clicks a button. A: As @Rebus.net mentioned, you can use the BackgroundWorker class. The RunWorkerCompleted event can be used to signal that the thread completed. Recent clinical trials have demonstrated that CD4 T cell depletion in chronically HIV-infected patients may reduce plasma viral burden to undetectable levels. Unfortunately, antiviral therapy is often compromised by immune reconstitution inflammatory syndrome (IRIS), and a better understanding of the immune response during the CD4 T cell reconstitution period will hopefully allow for selective immunotherapeutic interventions to prevent and treat IRIS.

In this grant proposal, we will characterize the function of human T cells ex vivo after CD4 T cell reconstitution. We hypothesize that components of adaptive immunity, particularly HIV-specific CD8 T cells and regulatory CD4 T cells will play a role in immune reconstitution. We will test these hypotheses with four specific aims. First, we will examine the ex vivo function of CD4 T
