(Colopl), Koi Pro.Q: How to validate a combobox selection in form based on other datagridview cell's value I am running into issues trying to validate a datagridview with a combobox column. I'm pretty sure this can be done, but I don't have enough experience and haven't been able to find a relevant question on the site. I have a list box that contains checkboxes (using the CheckedListBox) and I'm trying to add another column that is a combobox that automatically populates based on the row source of the checklistbox. I can get it to work pretty well, but a few issues: 1. When you click the row, the combobox correctly changes the combobox selection to the same value in the table, but when I click away the change is not reflected in the combobox. 2. I need to validate the combobox based on the combobox selection in a row, not in a table. It is important to me that the combobox selection in the first row of the combobox be the same as the first row in the table, but I need it to be independent from the selection in the other rows in the table. This is the code I have so far: Private Sub Checkbox_ListBox_CurrentRowChanged(ByVal sender As System.Object, ByVal e As System.Windows.Forms.ListChangeEventArgs) 'Bind List Box to a table Me.CheckBox_ListBox.ValueMember = "EmployeeNumber" Me.CheckBox_ListBox.DisplayMember = "FirstName" Me.CheckBox_ListBox.FormatEnabled = True 'Add a combobox to each row and

It's my favourite game" "Such a gas barrier coating is based on a film made of polymer coating material produced by the wet-on-wet coating technique, in which two layers are applied consecutively and dried. The first layer is a "skin" layer which provides good adhesion to the metal, for example a metal sheet; the second layer is an anti-clogging layer which keeps the pores in the metal sheet closed after processing. The "skin" layer is not resistant to solvents, which means that it cannot withstand processing chemicals, such as water, organic solvents, inorganic acids, inorganic bases, and ionic electrolytes, etc. The "skin" layer is, as a rule, substantially insensitive to an organic solvent. In the case of a subsequent processing step, solvents which have penetrated the thin "skin" layer can attack the "skin" layer. When a coating comprising a "skin" layer made of polymer coating material is applied to a metal sheet, in particular on a hot metal sheet, the "skin" layer is softened by the heat, and the adhesion between the "skin" layer and the metal sheet is weakened. As a result, the "skin" layer tears during processing. The resulting damage to the coating is disadvantageous, however. The "skin" layer can only be made of certain polymers and must have certain properties in order to adhere to the metal sheet. EP-A-1 885 244 describes a metal coating in which a thin layer
