The gameplay experience delivered by HyperMotion will offer more accurate ball and player positioning while enhancing the control of players on the field and in tight spaces, and the motions of player attacks and tackles will be more realistic and "invigorating." FIFA 2K Sports, EA's flagship sports video game franchise, introduces the opportunity for all players in the world to experience the thrill of FIFA 2K on their Xbox One, Xbox One X, PlayStation 4 and PlayStation 4 Pro, and PC platforms at the same time as its previously announced release dates. FIFA 2K will be playable on any Xbox One platform and any PlayStation 4 system, on day one following the game's release. FIFA 2K will be playable on all platforms through EA Access on its launch day. Additionally, there will be multiple channels on Twitch, YouTube and Facebook Live on which fans can play the game on launch day. Beginning September 12, fans can also purchase a digital download or physical disc for FIFA 2K through Origin on Windows PC. To celebrate the new features and enhancements of FIFA 2K, EA SPORTS will be announcing more details on a new TV show leading up to the release of FIFA 2K. Other announcements will be available on EA.com/2K and on all social media channels for FIFA 2K. For complete details, please visit The road to release for FIFA 2K has been a long and winding one, but at long last, on September 11, the game will be available on Xbox One, Xbox One X, PlayStation 4 and PlayStation 4 Pro, and as a launch title on PC. It was a tight window, but the result of years of hard work from EA Vancouver, our studio in beautiful Vancouver that worked on the game, and the designers and developers around the world working together. I think it's fair to say that at this time last year, I have no idea if FIFA 2K would ever see the light of day. Fingers crossed, fans and reviewers, and I can say that all those fans, reviewers and developers across the world worked together to achieve something that I would not have been able to claim with confidence a year ago, and I think we all feel pretty good about that. I guess it's not a bold prediction, but we knew that it was going to be a long time before we saw the game. I'll come out and say that in the last year

Features Key:

- Full body movements: Matchday animations provided to great effect by the introduction of "HyperMotion Technology", which is able to use real-life player data to animate on-pitch movements through integration into the gameplay models to replace existing animations.

This gives players exacting body movements, putting the finishing touches on the incredible fluidity they've become known for.

- Natural passing: Players will be more dynamic in their ball movements, generating less artificiality and betraying their methodical passing with more natural or player-like movement.
- All-new dribbling: Adding a new dribble system to FIFA for the first time since the FIFA 13 release. Players can now move in dribbling situations by initiating an attack and then, using judicious positioning and head-down dribbling controls, complete a pass or shoot. Players will now be able to perform "give and go" dribbles, creating a combination play system where players change direction quickly to create openings or to score.
- Different tactics: Players will enjoy faster, more dynamic gameplay that allows for more diverse passing combinations and situational variations.
- Camera work: New ball physics model and camera work give the ball more control and knock back, adding further realism. The new dribbling system makes it easy to move the ball quickly in tight spaces. Players will be able to pick the ball up from the ground, changing and focusing their movements to see better options on the pitch.
- Teamwork: A new system will allow managers to exploit a team's weaknesses to score against their rivals, offering a fresh and new team advantage.
- Infinite creativity: Create the history of football in FIFA. Manage your franchise for multiple seasons with multiple managers.

Q: When is memory from one process pushed to shared memory space in a cluster? I am very new to clusters and maybe I am asking a stupid question... I see if people want to simulate clusters by using shared memory or message passing interface (MPI) with some sort of network, they first create a global shared memory space, and then one process writes to the shared memory, another process reads the value from that shared memory space. My question is: When is the memory of one process pushed to that shared memory? Is it when the first process writes to that shared memory? Or when the second process reads that shared memory? If it is when the first process writes to that shared memory, in what way does this information help with one process sending data to another one in a cluster? I don't get it. Or maybe when the data is sent to another process in the cluster is when the shared memory is pushed to a process in the cluster? But in that case, wouldn't the first process that wrote to the shared memory in the first place need to send the information to another process that has the shared memory? Then when a process sends a message to the other process, what happens to the values in the shared memory? I don't understand how the shared memory is pushed to the other process, and if this is pushed to the other process when the second process reads from that shared memory, what is the difference between pushing information from a process to a shared memory space in the first
