“For the past seven years, we’ve been building a FIFA game that captures all the emotion and intensity of the real sport,” said Yoshida. “Today we’re excited to announce the biggest step forward in realism, with “HyperMotion Technology.” We’re continuing to work on further enhancements to gameplay and the addition of a new set of player ratings. We’re also planning to announce some of the new license player packs. As ever, we’re also hugely grateful to our partners at EA SPORTS.” This year, with EA SPORTS FIFA 19, EA SPORTS added first person celebrations, dribble moves and signature tackles to the foot and added new animations for tight-turn quick touches, off-balance shots and volleys, while also creating the new Tackling system with Hard Knocks to provide a detailed understanding of how players can be tackled. VFX and in-game audio enhancements include new crowd and stadium atmospherics, and new player and goal collisions. Modern player intelligence has been improved with pitchside reaction to the ball and improved movement. The AI also learns and adapts throughout a match, displaying player intelligence by adapting their play style and tactics, with players like Lionel Messi and Robert Lewandowski learning their opponents’ play styles and reacting to new scenarios throughout a match. The “Biggest Shot” feature in FIFA 19 sees players, in combination with a focus on creating a wide range of attacking options, pressing high up the field and playing off quick men, creating a sport much closer to the real-world. To help players understand the game mechanics, the in-game IQ system has been improved. IQ is displayed in the form of player tendencies; players display a range of tendencies, including formations, tactics, and positions. Players can understand and control these tendencies, which are then displayed on the pitch as game actions. FIFA 20 was the most downloaded version of the series. FIFA 20 was the most downloaded version of the series in the U.S. across each platform (PS4, Xbox One, Xbox 360, Wii U, 3DS, PS3, and PC), with the Xbox 360 version being the most downloaded across all platforms. In total, in-game sales of FIFA 20 grew to more than 9.8 million units sold in 2019, contributing to EA’s second quarter sales growth, which surpassed
