Players can utilize the new Player Trajectory System to create unstoppable break-throughs, speed up and slow down their players, better utilize ball control, and increase their intelligence in defensive duels. In addition, Player Intelligence has been enhanced and players can now make quicker decisions and take smaller steps when in possession of the ball. Defensive pressure and transitions now last a shorter time, and controlled higher quality ball possession in open spaces allows more room for players to make better decisions. As a result, players will be more involved and players will hold the ball longer, positioning themselves in a stronger position to make smarter decisions. Before a tackle is attempted, defensive players will now have a greater focus on distance to the target, rather than simply determining whether a player is close enough to make a tackle. Meanwhile, the impact force of a tackle is now greater and a player can now impact multiple opponents more quickly. Similar to Player Trajectory, Player Behaviour has also been further refined. Players will now move quicker and receive more accurate passes when in possession. In addition, midfielders now receive more accurate passes as they move forward, slowing down in possession to let the player behind them play. The Pitch Toolkit has also been further developed, with focus areas on improving crowd management in aerial duels, moving defenders off their line more quickly, closing space for aerial duels, and managing attacking transitions. Meanwhile, goalkeepers can be positioned more effectively in penalty areas, and defenders can be placed more quickly in defensive positions on the pitch. These changes ensure a more realistic feel to a football match, while also engaging players in a more active way, allowing them to use their football intelligence to win matches and improve their team's chances of success. All these changes combine to make FIFA 22 a more realistic football experience, allowing players to show off their football skills in a different way.
