Online(Steam) - PC - Ostriv: A virtual reality game featuring an online multiplayer mode. get the idea (in fact the founders had no idea their ever intended to make a money). We are simply hoping that the site will continue to function as a place for feedback, questions, and just general recommendations to the Y. I wasn't trying to be flippant, but since I work with an interactive agency that does a lot of work at the Y, I know the gamut of experiences and love to hear stories from people. We also get a lot of calls on a regular basis for equipment ideas/challenges. I think it is a bad idea. A lot of people here work with Y's that are going through and hopefully have outgrown the frustrations and have accepted that its the price of doing business at the Y. If you are one of those people then I would not want the perception of an employee defending this. If they intend to bring in outside money through investors, etc, then that is a very different story and is of course justified by the need for that. But if they do it off of "maintenance fee" revenues and/or donations, then that is a pretty big admission that they don't have the money. Even if they do it as a way to collect data for some future need, I am not sure that is a very good idea. All this is a moot point anyway, but I am a guest blogger at the YM (and
