The latest version of this program is called Photo Gallery. Paint has basic tools for editing color and brightness, plus a few more features, such as increasing or decreasing contrast. In Windows 8.1, there is a similar built-in program called Photos app, and it is very similar to Paint but can be used to import and edit photos. HMS Hindustan (1921) HMS Hindustan was an sloop of the Royal Navy that served in the Mediterranean Sea during the Second World War. Hindustan was built by Harland & Wolff of Belfast. She was launched on 2 August 1921, spent a few years at Birkenhead Naval Base, and was commissioned in the Royal Navy in 1924. She was the last of the seventy-three County-class ships to be completed, taking an extra year because the only boats of the class taken up by the British Admiralty in the 1930s were "bleeding" ("in need of repair"). She served until 1931, when she was placed in reserve. She was scrapped in 1943. If you've ever visited Chizine or Anime Expo before, you know that it's "The Biggest Anime Convention in the West" and it's home to the Anime Expo Awards Show. And for the past few years, I've found myself recommending it to more people than you might realize (I would love to know if there is an "Anime Expert" at any point in a person's life!). It's a great place for a first experience with a Japanese convention, but it's also a great place to meet anime fans from all over the world as well as experience and learn about Japanese culture. I've talked about this several times in the past, but I just saw the new Sailor Moon Crystal shows premier (live, for the first time anywhere!) and I still can't get over how amazing it looks. When I first saw the new Sailor Moon anime movie opening, I came out of the theatre and immediately started thinking "that looks crazy good". That's just an image from the Sailor Moon Crystal opening, but I'm going to go ahead and tell you that there was also a Sailor Moon Crystal in the same room as the production. Of course there was, and it was amazing. When I first got to the event and met up with other people who were attending, I had an instant sense of camaraderie and tons of wonderful people I got to meet. Then we all went into the room to watch the first episode

Local Where It All Went Wrong For the Freeway Related Tags: LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Tucked into a corner of Michigan's capital city, where the redbrick State Capitol building is dwarfed by the white spires of the Christian Science spire, is a large, white, bungalow-like building nestled on the corner of Newberry Street and Grand River Avenue. In the 1980s, this bungalow marked the start of a massive project that turned what was once a residential neighborhood into a bright, modern building that was considered the most modern of Lansing's governmental buildings, with a sleek, glass exterior, soaring ceilings and the state's Capitol building across the street. The project was intended as a showpiece of Michigan's nascent mass transportation effort. By 1989, full-length glass bollards, topped with white lights and lights at the ends, stretched from Newberry to Congress Street, and the building was one of only a handful of spaces in the city that had direct access to the bus stop at Newberry and Congress Street. By the early 1990s, the mass transit system in Lansing, which linked the state Capitol, the nearby Capital Area Transportation Authority (CATA) transit center and the bus stops for the Greyhound and Megabus bus lines, was the best in the state. But after years of use, it has fallen into disrepair. All-glass bollards, ripped from their concrete posts, now hang off the windowsills of what was once known as the Department of Transportation, and a giant sign that once lit up the facade at night warns visitors about the "Dangerous Building." It sits on the front lawn in front of what was a five-story underground garage. "It's the best glass I've seen," says Dr. Angela Hack, a retired physician and a member of the watchdog group Lansing-based Citizens Appointed Against Corruption (CAAC). "There's no glass left anywhere else in Lansing. It's so sad." The building's massive renovation is due to end at the end of the year, when the state leases the space to the Department of Health and Human Services. But as of August, a few lingering signs of problems remain. The glass bollards lining the corners of the building are barely hanging on their posts, one
