Comments Off on The Fourth Edition Of Strickberger's Evolution 1:1 language of the statute violates the equal protection clause. See In re: M.T. , 926 A.2d 157, 159 (Pa. Super. 2007) (holding that a statute violates equal protection if the distribution of burdens of government to groups within a classification is not roughly equal). Accordingly, Appellant's final issue is meritorious and counsel should be permitted to withdraw. We remand to the trial court to determine whether to grant a new trial. If so, the trial court must consider whether Appellant is entitled to any additional time to file post-sentence motions and an appeal, as well as the appropriate remedy. As a final matter, we note that, within his pro se brief, Appellant mistakenly attributes the Murphy-Burk doctrine of harmless error to the language "to be harmless beyond a reasonable doubt." The Murphy-Burk doctrine provides that a party who fails to object to a jury charge, even to omission of an essential element of the offense, waives the right to raise the objection on appeal. See United States v. Olano , 507 U.S. 725, 733 (1993);
