Q: Manage external video sources in unity or UME I'm writing a unity plugin that relies on video sources the plugin can access via a url. How do I go about dynamically loading the sources and the video output? I found this question, but the solution doesn't seem to work. The following code returns null for the VideoSource

var videoSource = (VideoSource)FindObjectOfType(typeof(VideoSource)); if (videoSource == null) { Debug.LogError("No video sources"); return false; }

A: Finally, I figured it out. VideoSource

videoSource = null; foreach (MediaStreamSource stream in GetMediaStreams()) { MediaStream mediaStream = new MediaStream(stream); if (mediaStream.VideoStream is VideoSource) { if (mediaStream.VideoStream.IsConnected) { videoSource = mediaStream.VideoStream as VideoSource; break; } } } if (videoSource == null) { Debug.LogError("No video sources"); return false; }

The API is actually pretty simple, and you can find more info here

Andrew Yang, a businessman and registered Democrat, wants to answer it with a very simple concept. He wants everyone in the country to get $1,000 a month, no strings attached. Yang has qualified for the first Democratic presidential debates, scheduled to take place June 26-27. This week, the Democratic National Committee announced that they will be live-streaming portions of the debates, as well as the Democratic primary debates held in Miami earlier this year. Oral anticoagulation is, even under optimal conditions, not completely predictable. This emphasizes the need to initiate such therapy as soon as possible. The INR (International Normalized Ratio) is the best indicator of the prothrombin time, i.e. the sensitivity and specificity of the International Normalized Ratio is 100%. As an important risk factor for thromboembolism in the oral anticoagulation of patients with atrial fibrillation, the INR should be monitored at least once a week and, if possible, 2-3 times a week. In case of an unacceptable or suboptimal INR course, the aim of the INR monitoring should be to maintain the INR in the therapeutic range. On the other hand, the individual INR-profile should be used to reduce the risk of overanticoagulation. Numerous studies have shown that the area-under-the-INR-time-curve (AUC-INR) is a useful tool to estimate the risk of thromboembolism. Furthermore, the area-under-the-INR-time-curve is a good indicator of the individual's INR-plateau and half-life. In contrast, the INR-value of the next dose of coumar
