I've changed the z-index value and it works fine, but the addEventListener doesn't seem to be working. This is my code: window.onload = function() { var map = document.getElementById("map") var img = document.getElementById("image") var draggable = img.cloneNode(false) map.appendChild(draggable) draggable.style.position = "absolute" draggable.style.z-index = "0" draggable.addEventListener("dragstart", function() { alert("works!") }, false) document.body.appendChild(draggable) } A: You're calling addEventListener() on an element that is not yet appended to the DOM. This will never work, not even after you add it to the DOM. You should call it inside a DOM ready handler or bind your function 648931e174
