Rated 4 out of 5 by daveo Only a few items I would have changed about this item: 1 - the handle pocket is a bit small, so if you have a bag with a large pocket, for longer periods, you'll run the risk of the bag getting a bit wet, while your handle is in the water 2 - the handle pocket is not big enough to allow a body warmer without a pocket flap 3 - The handle has no way to attach the pocket to it 4 - The handle pocket does not close at the top 5 - The hat is not quick enough, and the pockets in the hat are small

ISO 31000 is a recognized quality management standard for use in quality management within the manufacturing process. In 1992, the Aviation Safety Authorities from both ICAO and IATA (the two regional aviation trade organizations in the Americas and Europe, respectively) began working together on the development of a standard for aviation accident and incident reporting. The result was published in December 1994 and was based on an earlier set of guidelines under the auspices of ICAO, though the process was completely independent of ICAO and IATA.
