The frequency of the key is time t. Tm. æ Foreword by Brenda SantaMaria.193-199.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a cross-linked porous polymer and a polymer membrane made of the cross-linked porous polymer. The present invention also relates to a cross-linked porous polymer and a polymer membrane made of the cross-linked porous polymer, which are useful for an adsorption separation membrane for water treatment, wastewater treatment or the like, and a method for producing the polymer membrane. 2. Description of the Related Art Various polymeric membranes having pores uniformly dispersed therein are used as filtration membranes for liquid filtration, and desalination membranes, water treatment membranes, microfiltration membranes and ultrafiltration membranes for separation of a filtrated or adsorbed matter contained in a fluid. For example, a polysulfone membrane formed by a solution molding method using a mixed solution of a polysulfone and a plasticizer is known as a desalination membrane (see, for example, Japanese Laid-open Patent Publication No. 2002-315949). In addition, a hollow fiber membrane formed by melt spinning a polysulfone solution is known as a microfiltration membrane (see, for example, Japanese Laid-open Patent Publication No. H6-234868). Further, a hollow fiber membrane formed by dissolving a polysulfone in a mixed solvent of a nonionic surfactant and an aromatic solvent is known as a reverse osmosis membrane (see, for example, Japanese Laid-open Patent Publication No. H6-234868). It is also known that a chloromethyl polysulfone membrane formed by polymerization of a monomer chloromethyl polysulfone having a sulfonyl chloride group in a side chain in the presence of a phase-transfer catalyst has excellent chemical resistance and mechanical strength (see, for example, Japanese
