chinese hs essay qualification help with writing an argumentative persuasive essay papers 8th edition solutions manual1. Technical Field This invention relates to the field of systems using imagery, and more specifically relates to the field of lysimeters and control of contaminants. 2. Discussion of Related Art The monitoring of groundwater is useful in determining the presence and/or concentration of naturally occurring contaminants in groundwater and in monitoring the impact on the groundwater of man-made contamination sources. Lysimeters are used to measure the volume and concentration of naturally occurring and/or man-made contaminants in groundwater. Lysimeters work by allowing the groundwater to be drawn into a vessel where it is treated with reagents and chemicals to react with the naturally occurring and/or man-made contaminants present in the water. The treated water is sent to a drain, and any naturally occurring contaminants that are not reacted are flushed out of the lysimeter. Contaminants may be naturally occurring, man-made, or environmental (e.g. urban runoff). An important part of the design of a lysimeter is the design of the chamber (e.g. for a lysimeter for use in monitoring heavy metals). The chamber may be used to process soil samples. A common form of chamber is a lined steel tank. The lined steel tank is lined with a soil filter media. The tank is typically filled with a reagent containing any of a number of different reagents, such as aqua regia or aqua regia with additional reagents such as tartaric acid (chromic acid). Once the groundwater is drawn in and the reagent is added, the groundwater reacts with the reagent to change the color of the water in the reagent. For example, if the water is drawn up from a depth of 50 feet, the water that comes into contact with the reagent will be light yellow. The chamber is also lined with an isolating, semi-permeable membrane or fence, that will allow contaminants that the soil is contaminated with to pass from the soil into the chamber, but prevent groundwater from entering the chamber. This membrane is usually glass fiber or cloth. Lysimeters typically have to be installed deep in the ground to get sample size volumes and concentrations of contaminants that are representative of the volume and concentration of the contaminant in the aquifer. The depth where the lysimeter is installed varies, but is often from three hundred to seven hundred feet. Testing a site with a lysimeter requires a significant
