this is not a recreation font issue. Moving the font down to -25 is an acceptable choice to get the text to the right of the dot. This is done by using a negative value in the y position. The best output for me is having all the base characters and the letters with accentuated forms, too. I would suggest to use the exact same font with a different font for the accentuated forms. But again, I might be wrong here. Do not have a Windows machine handy? Try it out on a Linux (or even Unix) machine. what the -. y parameter. ç Vermarco - 3e Vermario - 3.3 Font. Fig. 5) : Vermarco has quite a large set of characters. I have seen characters such as “”, “”, “”, and “”. Also, as shown, the use of the letter “”. 10, Fig. 5 shows the initial display of a single character set in Vermarco. There were two available fonts in the font editor at the same time. I could do my research. The only thing I wanted to use was Times Roman. I also found out that the Font Studio software is very easy to use and is free for my purpose. There were no instructions on how to use this software. So I have to do my own research using web searches, and I just applied the settings provided by the Font Studio software. What should I do when I get my results? Using the Character Color feature, I could get the accentuated characters and the base characters to appear together. The final result was a combination of Times Roman and Verdana (shown in Fig. 7). However, I still got a space between the text and the image border. I want to use Times Roman with the figures and the lowercase letters blacked out. Can I do this? I found that Font Studio has a Total Character feature. I think that this program works using a one-to-one relationship. The way I used the Total Character feature was to black out the characters. There was
