in approximately april 2016, the marketing automation for agents and professional service providers company knowncircle had a large volume of data obtained by an external party. the data belonging to the now defunct service appeared in json format and contained gigabytes of data related to the real estate and insurance sectors. the personal data in the breach appears to have primarily been used for marketing purposes, including logs of emails sent and tracking of gift cards. a small number of passwords for knowncircle staff were also present and were stored as bcrypt hashes. delivering a visceral wwii gaming experience, company of heroes redefines real time strategy gaming by bringing the sacrifice of heroic soldiers, war-ravaged environments, and dynamic battlefields to life. beginning with the d-day invasion of normandy, players lead squads of allied soldiers into battle against the german war machine through some of the most pivotal battles of wwii. through a rich single player campaign, players experience the cinematic intensity and bravery of ordinary soldiers thrust into extraordinary events. in approximately november 2016, it was revealed that the search engine optimisation management company rankwatch exposed a mongo db with no password publicly whereupon their data was exfiltrated and posted to an online forum. the data contained 7.4 million unique email addresses along with names, employers, phone numbers and job titles in a table called us_emails. when contacted and advised of the incident, rankwatch would not reveal the purpose of the data, where it had been acquired from and whether the data owners had consented to its collection.
