A spokesperson for the TV station stated that it had received "numerous requests" to air the series, and that it would look into the matter. Later that year, the TV station and MBC Productions renewed their contract, and the series was broadcast again on MBC. The series began to gain popularity, with more than 40 million viewers worldwide, and 10 million views a month in the Arab countries. The first six episodes were also released on DVD. In February 2015, the series resumed broadcast on the MBC, after the controversy had died down. The next summer, the series was broadcast once again as an educational programme and was posted on the Internet Archive. It was also released as a DVD. The series has been criticised for being blasphemous and for flouting the rules of Islam by reciting the Qur'an. In interviews, Ismail, who plays Omar, has stated that he has no religious affiliation, and does not discuss his personal beliefs. The series is based on the life of Umar Ibn al-Khattab, who was the second Caliph of Islam and among the early Successors to Muhammad. According to some sources he may have been from the Umayyad clan of the tribe of Thaqif. According to others, he was of Kufan origin. However he is accepted by Muslims as the second of the first generation of the Rashidun. He was the father of Ahmad, the father of Asma. Al-Bukhari quotes several hadiths about him and the Prophet (PBUH) also describes him as a person of great piety. Muslims regard him as the most virtuous person to have lived since Muhammad. It is reported that he was extremely modest in his dress and cleanliness and that he never ate or drank anything that had been touched by any human or anything likely to offend a Muslim's conscience. Most of the time he buried his head in his cloak or his sleeve. 5ec8ef588b
