More information about the project: Installation of Favourite Folders: 1. Extract the archive "Favourite Folders.zip" 2. Copy the folder "Icons" to the directory "Packages" 3. Run the game and enjoy Favourite Folders was developed by Q: How to create arrow shapes using svg/d3.js I am working on a small d3.js / svg project, I want to be able to generate the following shapes How would I go about generating these shapes? I was thinking of maybe using just a circle, with no stroke and overlaying/positioning of other SVG paths to get the actual shape? Any help would be appreciated A: Create a circle with a linear gradient fill. You can use the stroke to round off the edges. If you don't know what the width of your images is, you can use a circle, a gradient with a repeat, and a path instead of two gradient fills. svg { width: 500px; height: 500px; } The effect of epinephrine on two indices of endurance capacity. Endurance capacity, as measured by maximum oxygen uptake (VO2 max), has been inversely correlated with measures of sympathetic nervous system (SNS) activity. SNS activity can be modulated by variations in circulating levels of circulating catecholamines, including epinephrine. In the present study, the authors examined the effects of plasma epinephrine on 2 indices of endurance capacity: (a) the value at which VO2 max was equal to VO2 max when supine, and (b) the exercise tolerance (ET) defined as

All icons have transparent background.(CNN) Hurricane Irma is kicking up a wind storm in the Caribbean, knocking out power in the region and threatening to flood the US territory of Puerto Rico. The Category 5 storm was once a Category 4 but strengthened to a Category 5 late Sunday as it moved across the Atlantic, passing several hundreds of miles west of the Dominican Republic, according to the US National Hurricane Center With a radius of 1,600 miles, Irma could wreak havoc across the Caribbean, bringing a storm surge of up to 15 feet and heavy winds of up to 150 mph to the US territory of Puerto Rico. CNN has reached out to the National Weather Service, the Puerto Rico National Weather Service and the US National Hurricane Center for more information. Irma was expected to make its closest point of approach to Puerto Rico at 7 p.m. Sunday, according to the National Hurricane Center. "Puerto Rico has been under a storm warning since Saturday night, and areas within the eye are at the greatest risk for destructive storm surge and dangerous winds," the National Weather Service warned Sunday afternoon. "Powerful winds are possible and there is a possibility of a tornado touching down on the island. This storm will also produce life-threatening storm surge that will result in major inundation in already-flooded coastal areas." Puerto Rico Gov. Ricardo Rossello has warned residents to seek shelter as the storm strengthens and predicted Hurricane Irma's passage through the Caribbean could be the "most devastating" storm in the region in 30 years. "The outlook is not good," Rossello said in a news conference late Saturday, speaking in Spanish. Irma's path through the region has been called a "perfect storm" of a storm, as the storm progresses toward Florida, making its way west and toward the United States. The threat to Florida Irma's path is making its way toward the southeastern US, threatening Florida and bringing big swells along with a rare hurricane-force wind gust in the state. Florida was placed under a hurricane watch Sunday afternoon, as the hurricane swirled west of the Lesser Antilles. The hurricane watch area stretched from the northern coast of South Carolina through the state of Georgia. "Most hurricane watches and warnings expire at midnight," according to the National Hurricane Center. The hurricane watch area includes the coastlines of Georgia and South Carolina in the state of Georgia. "This is the first hurricane watch for Florida since Ike in 2008 and the first time since Charley in 2004 that Florida has been
