This new pricing scheme simply replaces the previous fixed rate plan and introduces tiered pricing so you pay per month rather than a one-time fee. This is an important milestone for the company on the digital front and a welcome break from the price increases of years ago. The company is still charging a lot of money for professional software updates and content upgrades. The subscription structure also makes it difficult to provide versions of the product without a subscription. If you are a current subscriber you will have free access to this new version (and others) for 30 days. After that, you will be charged $49.99/month for 21 more days.
