Is this possible? How to do this? A: Try using, CELERY_APP = 'name_of_celery_app' CELERY_BROKER_URL = 'localhost' and in.bashrc, add these lines alias celeryd='exec supervisorctl reread' alias celerybeat='bash -c "supervisorctl reread && supervisorctl stop celerybeat && supervisorctl start celerybeat" && exit' Now run your celery beat as supervisorctl (supervisorctl), supervisorctl restart celerybeat When you start celery beat, it will check if it is running already and if it is not, it will start it. EDIT Just noticed the 'hello' string, which means that your supervisor has started a container. The above solution will not work. You need to use the following: supervisorctl stop celerybeat After you have restarted supervisorctl, you can start your app: supervisorctl start celerybeat And when you are done with celery beat, stop it: supervisorctl stop celerybeat For more information, read the docs of supervisorctl Q: Cannot connect to MongoDB Atlas in Openshift I have a simple Ruby on Rails app with a MongoDB database.
