I have a solution with two projects, a Web Project and a Class Library project. I've created a new project (another class library) and want to use my old solution to create a class library for this new project. I need to add WebApi references to the project, so I can't just add references to the two projects inside the classlib project. The solutions are split into different solutions. Is there any way to keep the project references without changing the project hierarchy? I don't want to merge them because I don't want to mess with the project references.
