Changes in the basic interface include a new Preview Panel on the right side. Here are samples of images with basic adjustments: calibration settings, the adjustment sliders and automatic corrections. All of which were added to make the editing process faster and more informative to the user. I kind of dug deeper to find what else is new in the 5.0 release. This is one of the newest Lightroom features and one that was well needed. This feature allows your team members or even stakeholders to see your work in the app, edit it and then tag it. Now, most of us usually keep our work in the cloud, which makes this dandy. Now your clients can see your edits and comments and feedback on the same cloud that you use. In fact, I am currently working - so you can see what I am saying, right?
