Video Converter .LONDON (AP) — The United States and Russia appear locked in a political and military standoff in eastern Ukraine as pro-Russia rebels seek to control territory near the strategic Sea of Azov on the Black Sea coast. The government in Kiev appears gradually losing ground to the resurgent rebel forces under Russian command, and outside observers believe the war has the potential to destabilize the region and the wider world. “There are many options,” says NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen, “but we do not want a frozen conflict in eastern Ukraine.” The Obama administration has said it would be “unacceptable” if Russia made a “land grab” on Ukrainian territory. The Associated Press’ Berlin correspondent, Mathieu Von Rohden, reports on U.S. concerns over the Ukraine crisis, day after day. This video is from CNN’s Live Today, broadcast May 2, 2014. __ 5:57 a.m. A Ukrainian Army spokesperson says another massed of artillery has been pushed into the contested village of Maryinka near a hotly contested railway hub.
