A program that allows you to create and edit your own macros for the user-interface of Windows. The program, with some help from your imagination and some tricks, can allow you to create macros that control many aspects of the Explorer program. You can also create macros for many key combinations (even on key shortcuts like Ctrl-N or Ctrl-F) that will allow you to do simple things, like open and save a file. More advanced macros can do a lot more than this. You can create macros that will control all Explorer features, including setting desktop icons. You can control all of the properties of file dialogs, or, if you are more daring, you can create a macro that will change the name of a file just as it is being saved. The possibilities are endless, and KeyMacro gives you the tools to create any of them. Imagine the fun you can have with your keystroke patterns: you can go from editing the Registry to saving a file, from creating a file or folder to moving a file. With KeyMacro, you can set your pattern combinations to do almost anything. The interface is very easy to use. Just drag and drop KeyMacro onto your desktop. You can create your own macros for many Explorer features, and the program is perfect for use with Microsoft Visual Basic 6. FREEDV Description:
