Over the past month, I did a Clean Sweep on my entire archive using a combination of Adobe's Photoshop and Lightroom, and manual fixes using Photoshop's own Content Aware Fill tool. I then used Lightroom 5's manual fixes to remove the automatic fixes that Lightroom 5 made for me. When I stepped over a simple "Cauchy" noise filter, I realized just how much I hate that tool. Photoshop CC has all important Pro tools, and if you're a Creative Cloud subscriber, you have access to those in Adobe Photoshop CC. In the main for Photoshop, it seems the update was focused on speed, although I'm not sure how much of that can be found in other areas of the application. The ability to save and process files in the cloud is one of the main improvements, although Photoshop expects you to have a strong internet connection. If you're a slow dialup connection, you may want to look at the optional service, Adobe Creative Cloud: Buy 1 Get 2. This allows you to download images saved in Photoshop CC to your second computer and if you have a fast enough connection and your user is logged out of Creative Cloud, you can actually upgrade your existing license of Photoshop CC at no additional cost. For those of you who have the option to stick with Creative Cloud for its other features, I'd suggest giving it a try for the changes.
